CLEARED.

foreign going steamers. They called here mainly for the purpose of coaling, and were for the most part British, but there was an increasing number of foreign vessels, and probably their number would go on increasing in the future. The second class of vessels were coasters running principally in the China and Japan seas. These also were mostly British, but here also there was an increasing number of foreign vessels, especially under the Chinese flag. The third class were those which might be described as having their habitat in Hongkong—vessels which were registered here, and which did not think the Ordinance would bear very harshly upon them. Under the terms of the Merchant Shipping Act all British ships had to be surveyed once in twelve months; therefore it would only be under exceptional circumstances that the Ordinance would press unfairly upon any ocean going steamer. But in regard to the second class, vessels engaged in the coasting trade, he thought the Ordinance would inflict a very great hardship upon those of them flying the British flag. Moreover he thought their legislation, if they confined it to vessels under the British flag, would be ineffective. The object of this Ordinance was not the protection of the British mercantile marine, but the protection of lives and limbs of the people here, and he did not see why a hundred passengers who left this port on a vessel flying the Chinese flag should not receive protection against boiler explosions, or those arising from faulty machinery, as well as a hundred passengers leaving on board a British vessel. If they laid an onerous obligation upon British ships alone, it would not be without its results in the competition that was being waged at the present day. To make the legislation impartial, he submitted that they would not succeed in doing so unless they applied these regulations to all vessels, whatever their nationality might be. The third class of ships were those running to Canton and Macao. They had no vessels of this kind at present, but what were under the British flag, but supporting the Chinese started a boat, would they permit them to run without survey or regulation of any kind, while these obligations were imposed upon the British vessels? As to shifting individual responsibility on to the shoulders of the Government, he thought the Bill before them would have that effect in some measure. They would find it was impossible to stop ships in transit, and submit them to a survey under this ordinance, and the whole matter would amount to this—that there would be a partial survey, and certificates would be given which would to a certain extent relieve the owners, agents, and others, of their responsibility, and if necessary those certificates would be produced in Court to shift the responsibility to other parties. Legislation of this kind ought not to be passed hastily or without due thought, and he thought it would be best considered by a committee. Under these circumstances he would suggest that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee of the Council for further consideration.

Mr. RYAN said very important principles were involved in the Bill, and supported the proposal of Mr. Johnson.

His Excellency said he entirely agreed with his two honourable friends in thinking the Bill could be advantageously considered by a Select Committee. He was sure the Council were indebted to Mr. Johnson for the facts and statements he had laid before them. The truth was that questions affecting mercantile shipping, or emigration or currency—such questions, although treated at that Council table, were imperial questions, and with reference to certain provisions in the Ordinance pointed out by his honourable friend, and to which he was disposed to take exception, he might observe that they were inserted in the Ordinance by the Attorney General, owing to the difficulties in the way of dealing with vessels under foreign flags. He would place before the Committee the despatches of the Secretary of State on this subject. As a matter of form they would read the Bill a second time then; this second reading merely involved the question of the principle of a measure, and he thought they were all agreed as to providing in some way "for the survey and regulation of steamships, and vessels propelled by steam."

The Attorney General said the Bill was introduced as part of a larger measure, and he thought it would be better for the whole matter to be referred to the Select Committee so that they could consider the provisions of the larger measure as well as those of the Ordinance now before them. The larger measure—a Bill for consolidating the Merchant Shipping Ordinances—might be read a first time to day to enable this to be done. The consideration of both measures by a Select Committee was, he thought, a very desirable thing; the subject was a very intricate one, and there were a great many matters in the larger measure with which he did not consider himself competent to deal. He would be glad to have the assistance of the members of the Council in dealing with them.

The Ordinance was then read a second time.

His Excellency: The question now is that this Ordinance be referred to a select committee. In other places it was the practice for gentlemen who moved for the committee to name its members. Would it be agreeable to Mr. Johnson to have the Acting Colonial Secretary, the Attorney General, and three unofficial members of the Council, to form a select committee of five.

The Attorney General: The Acting Chief Justice as well.

His Excellency: Certainly; he will be a most important addition. I may explain the introduction of the Ordinance now before us in this way. There was a General Merchant Shipping Consolidation Act being prepared by the Attorney General under instructions from home, and when the explosion occurred on board the Yaso I asked him to excuse from that Bill the clauses bearing upon the survey and regulation of steamships. We may now read this general or larger measure a first time, but before doing so I wish to mention one little matter, about which I may say I have been in communication with the Attorney General. In other colonies where commercial interests are large, the officer discharging similar duties to Captain Thomsett is styled "Captain of the Port," and certainly I believe there is no harbour in the British Empire abroad where it is more necessary than here to give the officer performing these duties the highest designation we can give him. In this Ordinance, and in future I think we may give Captain Thomsett the title of "Captain of the Port."

The Ordinance was then read a first time and referred to the Bill providing for the survey and regulation of steamships, to the Select Committee named.

His Excellency said he had every hope that the Select Committee would deal as speedily as possible with this important measure.

PUNISHMENT FOR PRISON OFFENCES.

His Excellency then moved the first reading of a Bill to amend Ordinance 4 of 1868. He said the necessity for this Bill arose in this way. When the sentence of a prisoner, who had been sent to twelve months imprisonment by the Chief Justice, expired, the man had to be discharged, although for some breach of prison discipline it might have been found necessary a day before the expiration of his sentence to sentence him to three days' solitary confinement on bread and water, or perhaps a week of such punishment. This Ordinance would enable such sentences as these to be enforced.

THE TEACHING OF ENGLISH.

In bringing forward a vote of $680 as salary for Mr. W. B. Arthur, the newly appointed Second Master at the Central School, and a vote of 400 guineas to Dr. Ellet for performing the duties of Inspector of Schools during the absence of Mr. Stewart.

His Excellency said the Conference for considering the important question of the teaching of English in the Government schools had met as they were doubtless well aware. It was perhaps not exactly in accordance with the usual order of business for him to lay the resolutions passed at that meeting before them on the present occasion, but he wished to do so so that they might, if they thought proper, express their views in regard to them and the subject to which they referred. In carrying out those resolutions it was of importance that they should have a thoroughly competent gentleman at the head of the Education Department in the absence of Mr. Stewart, and he believed it was universally admitted that Dr. Ellet had secured a gentleman of that description. Before Mr. Stewart left the Colony he thought it well to test the knowledge of English speaking possessed by the boys in the Central School. Accordingly on the 4th March he made a minute requesting Mr. Stewart to have a list made out of all the pupils on the books of the Central School, and mark with red ink the names of those speaking English. The pupils were accordingly examined by Mr. Stewart, and he was good enough to sub-divide them into several classes—1st, those who were able to speak English, as Mr. Stewart put it, "idiomatically," 2nd, those who could speak English with considerable fluency; 3rd, those who could speak it with difficulty; and, lastly, those who could not speak at all. Dr. Ellet was good enough to add to the list the ages of the boys, and the number of years they had been in the school. They had therefore the actual position of the Central School, so far as the knowledge of English was concerned, before them at the time Mr. Stewart left for Europe, and Dr. Ellet undertook his duties. The list showed that 8 of the pupils are English or European or Indian boys who speak English with considerable fluency; 18 are Chinese who also speak English with considerable fluency; 58 who speak the language with difficulty, and 35 who cannot speak English at all. Leaving out 60 or 70 boys, and commencing say at 10, he read that he was a Chinese boy 17 years of age, 5 years and 1 month in the school, cannot be said to speak English at all; 71, 17 years of age, 3 years 7 months in the school, speaks English with difficulty; 72, 20 years of age, 5 years in the school, cannot speak English at all, and so on. One boy, who had been 10 years 2 months at the school, did not speak English at all. He thought it was due to Dr. Ellet that when the time came next year they should have a similar test of the English spoken in the school. It was due also to Mr. Ellet to say that he showed every desire to carry out the resolutions of the Conference for having more English taught in the school. As to the increased teaching of English in the other Government Schools that would be effected as opportunity offered and by degrees in accordance with the expressed desires of the Conference. With respect to the grant of $680 as salary for Mr. Arthur he need hardly tell them that he was a most efficient gentleman.

Mr. Johnson enquired if the words read by His Excellency descriptive of the classes were those of Mr. Stewart.

His Excellency replied that they were.

Mr. RYAN asked if any of those 836 boys who were returned as not speaking English at all, could read or write.

His Excellency said that was not stated; he should not like to say they all learning English for four hours a day, but at the same time effective teaching of English for that time was impossible with the large number of boys and the limited staff of English masters the school then possessed.

Mr. RYAN thought it was desirable to have a list of the boys reading and writing English as well as speaking it.

His Excellency said the suggestion was a good one, and should be acted upon. The votes were then passed.

The Governor observed that the next vote was that for the salary of the French gardener (Mr. Cernan), to whom it was proposed to give $300 a year to have the sole management of the tree-planting Department. Mr. Ford, who was on his way out, had been instructed by Sir J. Hooker as to giving the Gardens a more especially botanical character; and as Mr. Ford was a most competent officer, he would make this a special and important feature of the Department.

PRAYA RECONSTRUCTION AND CRIMINAL DISCIPLINE.

His Excellency having asked the Council to pass a vote of $25,000 for the reconstruction of the Praya, Mr. F. B. JOYNSON remarked that a question had been previously made but not clearly answered, as to whether this vote would be charged upon the ordinary revenue of the Colony, or fall upon the Special Fund.

Mr. PRICE replied that it would form a charge upon the Special Fund, in accordance with the original views of the Government.

The Governor next observed that there were sums of $4,000 for new roads, and $1200 for Reuter's Telegrams; and proceeded to say that on the 17th of September last he had laid before them his views as to the introduction of some scheme of Prison Discipline, including some description of useful industrial hard labour, which would be of some utility to the Colony as well as to the prisoners themselves. He then concluded by saying that he should make no change without consulting with them, and to ask them to assist him in considering a most important question—whether or not it was advisable to continue to employ the prisoners inside the Gaol in simple shot drill, crank, &c. The Acting Chief Justice was happy to say, as to a Commission to consider the question; Mr. May also, and Mr. Ryrie—in fact, the majority who sat on that Commission, were present. He felt bound to remind them that this proposal in reality reversed the policy of his predecessor, Sir Arthur Kennedy, who no doubt had acted within his powers and in reference to it. It was not necessary that a Governor should always consult his Council in such matters; but as he had said on a previous occasion that he would do so, he would do so now. Although he was not bound by Ordinance, still he would ask that. With their approval, he proposed to alter the system of prison labour. He proposed to introduce an industrial element—hard work, which would be a benefit to the Colony and to the prisoners themselves. In the reconstruction of the Praya Wall, large masses of stone would have to be moved, and much other arduous labour; and he did not like to see the money of the Colony spent to do this, while the prisoners were employed in the unproductive labour of shot drill. He knew it was a moot point whether the latter kind of labour was detrimental or not; some thought it was detrimental, while others thought that mechanical labour was not the sort of labour to be used as a punishment. In the Praya work there would be large stones to dress, and this would have to be done for the Government whose laws had been broken, while the prisoners earned nothing;—this would be a specially severe punishment for a Chinaman. But as to wages he proposed that a certain proportion should be set aside week after week for hard and steady labour, on recommendation of the Superintendent, and given to the prisoner at the end of his sentence. This was no discovery of his, but was a system in operation at home, and one which had carried out with prisoners in Lunenburg. The remuneration—a very small per centage, say 1 per cent.—would be given, providing the work was thoroughly satisfactory. He would be very glad to hear what the Council had to say; this was the only change which he proposed at present.

The Acting Chief Justice (as Chairman of the Commission) was extremely glad to hear of this scheme of dealing with criminals. The Commission had the greatest difficulty in devising labour: they found that the stone was so soft, it was no labour to break it; and they found that crank labour was most insufficiently provided for; so they were at their wit's end to find labour for prisoners. The reason they did not know of outside work was that they knew in face of the strong opinion held against it by Sir Arthur Kennedy, it would be impracticable. His views were not against outside labour; he believed in convict labour outside the prison walls.

Mr. Lowcock remarked that the community generally would support what had been proposed, especially in view of the particular kind of work mentioned. When Sir Arthur Kennedy altered the system, there was the greatest trouble possible in preventing prisoners from escaping, while assaults and even murders were not unfrequently committed. The prisoners, on account of the laxity of discipline they were exposed to, were a great danger to the community. He counselled the adoption of a more careful means of closer watching of the conduct of the prisoners than hitherto, and repeated his approval of the proposal.

Mr. RYAN concurred with what had been said; the only point that still suited the Chinese exactly, while nothing would break the heart of a Chinaman more thoroughly than to contribute forced work and to get nothing for it. He thought the remuneration, even for good conduct, should be as little as possible.

Mr. PRICE moved that prisoners might therefore work inside or outside the prison under such regulations as the Governor might frame.

The Attorney General observed, on the question of communication, and general laxity of discipline on the roads, that there was less chance of this in quarrying or Praya Wall work, where you can always see and guard the body of workers. If the guard could not thus be able to get at and keep in awe the whole body, then it would be better to keep the prisoners in Gaol.

Mr. PRICE replied that of course the Surveyor General would have instructions to see that the prisoners were concentrated in one spot, and that every precaution must be taken against communication or other insubordination.

The Governor expressed his gratification at the manner in which his suggestion had been received. Of late the staff had been seriously improved. It had been defective in discipline and in character; most of the warders had been fined for drunkenness and for striking prisoners; and this had been represented to Lord Carnarvon before his arrival here by Mr. Austin. But now they had a different class of warders; they had a warder from England and a head turnkey, men trained for the very kind of work here suggested—and this was the first time they had such men at hand. They would insist upon hard work, which would have a deterrent influence and bring in a small profit; indeed, unless there was a profit the prisoner couldn't get his perquisite. Hongkong is better suited than most Colonies for a trial of this system, for by steady good conduct a prisoner may thus cut down his sentence by one-third, and have a trifle in his pocket that would prevent him from committing robbery again. It was at present only an experiment. His Excellency then proceeded to speak of the former practices of branding and deportation, and of Sir Hercules Robinson's scheme of remission by which a prisoner could slip one-third of his sentence by good conduct. This latter system was sanctioned by the Home Government, and it was an interesting question why it was altered, and why the scale was not carried into effect. When Sir Hercules left (he continued) Sir Richard Macdonnell offered to several good conduct prisoners who claimed the remission that they would receive it on their returning to the Colony. Some preferred to remain, some were branded and deported. This change was not reported to the Secretary of State, although it was most important as altering the conditions of the sentence. One of the oldest officials—certainly the most experienced and one of the ablest—who was then senior Magistrate, having found that these prisoners on their return were dogged without the interference of any magistrate or judge, very properly made a minute to the Colonial Secretary to the effect that he knew not by what law this was done. Mr. Pennycuik, the Attorney General, having declared that these punishments were illegal—though about 500 had been so punished—Sir R. Macdonnell stopped the system, and introduced an ordinance to render it legal. In his despatch Sir Richard dwelt upon the great number of prisoners in Gaol, and appeared to think that the large number (500) were malefactors and miscreants, and expressed a decided opinion that there could be no safety unless they were so branded. He might here mention that Sir John Smalls objected to the measure; and Lord Kimberley wrote to say that the Ordinance, reluctantly passed, had been sanctioned under the peculiar circumstances. At the very time this return of 500 prisoners was made, 102 European prisoners were in Gaol for some reason or other; but this, with the proportion of native and foreign population, was unfortunately not taken into the notice of the Secretary of State, had this been done, it could not have been argued that crime needed branding. It was not then known at home that the two-thirds scheme had been altered, and brands of sentence. Speaking frankly to them on the subject, whether or not this Ordinance should be repealed, he possessed that power and need not ask counsel. Personally he did not feel inclined to brand criminals, though in justice to Sir R. Macdonnell it ought to be said that the Police of Hongkong was then utterly demoralized and worse than useless; while to the credit of Sir A. Kennedy, he found it, on his arrival at Hongkong, as a detection was so great, with the photographic gallery and the efficient detectives and new Chinese warders. If the safety of the Colony demanded it, it would be his duty to do as his predecessors had done; but it was not necessary. They could take time to consider the question, and he would further on submit a resolution.

Mr. Lowcock referred to the proposal made some time since to transport criminals to Labuan, and asked whether any communication had been received on the subject. If the most violent criminals were transported, there would be no necessity for branding.

The Governor replied that the suggestion would receive His Lordship's best consideration, but the home authorities were not prepared to accept it.

In reply to Mr. Johnson, His Excellency was understood to say that remonstrances had been made against deportations from Northern Ports to Hongkong, and a Consular officer had been reproved for having done so.

In reply to Mr. Ryrie, the Governor said he thought branding was a cause of crime, as it drove back the criminals to Hongkong. He had seen this in Macao, and other places; not even an emigration agent would take a branded man, and he could not get honest work anywhere, so he returned to dishonesty where. One case had come to his knowledge where a man had got 14 days for unlawful possession, but after one month's imprisonment was branded and deported. Statistics showed a steady increase of crime; and Mr. Douglas, who was a shrewd, practical man, used to say that the branded men were always driven back to us or started.

The CHIEF JUSTICE remarked that with the wonderful memory of some of the turnkeys, and the photographic system, branding was unnecessary, although when in gaol prisoners occasionally got so fat that they could not get out of their cells, and that in cases of short sentences he was inclined still further to reduce the rice allowance. As an experiment one-third had been struck off, under the supervision of Dr. Ayres; and although they must not seriously affect health, still the great object of a gaol was to make it thoroughly deterrent.

PAVEMENTS.

His Excellency observed that the sale of very cheap and very bad spirits had been engaging his attention; and if he had not power to deal with it under present ordinances, he would certainly bring in a bill giving him power to do so.

Mr. May drew attention to the difficulty that soldiers and sailors would then rush to native spirits (samshu), which was almost poisonous in large quantities; he had known of soldiers who died from drinking it like beer. That was a great difficulty.

The Governor said he would note what was said.

The Council then rose.

FAREWELL SERMON.

The Rev. J. Lamont preached his farewell sermon in Union Church yesterday morning to a crowded congregation. The rev. gentleman has made many friends by his quiet, unobtrusive, earnest labours, and by the sincerity, honesty and consistency of his character; so that he will be much missed by not only his congregation but by many who were not connected with him as a pastor. Mr. Lamont took for his text II. Cor. xiii. v. 14. Having given an exposition of the words, he concluded—My friends, the relationship between a pastor and his people partakes in a large degree of that which existed between the apostle and the churches among whom he laboured and to whom he wrote. We have in many respects the same anxieties, and fears, and disappointments, and joys, and sorrows. If we are in any degree faithful to our trust we can understand the apostle's feelings in all his words of earnest entreaty, exhortation, encouragement, and warning. And now it has come in the providence of God that we should experience also what he felt when he bade them farewell and offered this glorious benediction prayer. It may be the same would expect me now to repeat to what I have done, and also to what I have neglected to do, during the past five years, and that I should say something concerning the failures, and disappointments, and infirmities, and sins that have marked the period of my ministry among you. But these I consider are not the most appropriate subjects to bring before a congregation. They are indeed of the highest interest and importance to my own soul, but between myself and God let them now remain; and with the apostle I might also say "With me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of by man's judgment, for He that judgeth is the Lord!" Yes, we serve a Master who is touched with a feeling of our infirmities, and whose blood cleanseth us from all sin, a Master full of tenderness and full of love, to whom we must one day give an account of our ministry, and to him we would rather render that account than to the kindest and most sympathizing earthly friend with whom God has ever blessed us here below. It might be expected also that I should speak now of that which I might consider your failings as a church and congregation, the want of interest which some may have shown in regard to the work and welfare of the church, a want of interest in its service and support; but these things also I prefer to leave between yourselves and God. If conscience to day tells any of you that there has been a remission in the service of God in the past, then on your knees before God resolve that in His promised strength it shall henceforth be your duty to be most careful attention. Any neglect of duty in this respect has not been a wrong done to me, but a wrong done to yourselves and to my Master, with whom therefore I leave you to deal. To me there has been nothing but kindness, the very greatest kindness, shown by all—kindness, much of it unexpected and much of it undeserved, but let me say here once more that your kindness to me has not been unappreciated, nor will it ever be forgotten. My work among you might have been better, much better done, I know, and I am painfully conscious of much unfaithfulness in many things, but here in the faith of God, I can honestly say that I have endeavoured to impress upon you all the need of the Holy Spirit to sanctify your souls, and I have sought to point you to Him who is ever watching to bless and to save, and who, thanks to His name, is waiting still to-day. However feebly and imperfectly my part has been done, the record stands in heaven for a witness that you have had the way of salvation already put before you, and pardon and eternal life pressed upon your acceptance time after time. And now let me, in God's name, what has been the result of it all? Have you accepted the Saviour yet as your saviour, or have you continued still to refuse His love? But very few present here shall ever again hear me speak in the Master's name and declare the offers of eternal life, and now, as a last request, let me entreat you to spare me the terrible agony of having to witness against any of you so as to seal your condemnation in that dreadful day when we all shall meet again before the great white throne to be judged according to our actions here. After we have parted I may hope to meet with very few until then; and oh, let me beseech you once again, for your souls' sake, make sure that you then shall stand on the right hand side of yon judgment throne. Take Jesus to be your Saviour now, if He is not already yours, and so our meeting here will be a blessed one indeed—all our wanderings ended, all our sins overcome for ever, gathered all in our Father's home on high to part again no more. But still we are here in this strange land amid the darkness, and the sighing, and the sorrow, and this morning we are come to the place where our pathways must diverge, and the ties that have bound us together, except those of friendship and Christian brotherhood, must all be rent asunder. Therefore, "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all." May all the blessings that come through the grace of Christ be yours, yours all that the love of God bestows, and the constant communion of the Holy Ghost be yours.

THE RECENT TORNADO AT CANTON.

The following correspondence is published in the Government Gazette of Saturday:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, Hongkong, 13th April, 1878.

SIR,—On behalf of this Government and of the inhabitants of Hongkong, I venture to ask you to convey to His Excellency the Viceroy the deep sympathy of the whole community here on the sudden blow that has befallen Canton.

I am making arrangements with Mr. Price for endeavouring to repair one small part of the disaster, that relating to the Gardens at Shamen. From the Gardens at Government House, the Public Gardens, and I think I may safely add from every garden in Hongkong that can spare them, we shall send you up young trees, shrubs, and plants to fill, to some slight extent, the place of those that have been destroyed.—I am, &c.,

J. POPE HENNESSY, To Dr. Hance, British Consulate, Canton.

H. M. CONSULATE, Canton, 18th April, 1878.

SIR,—As requested in your Despatch of the 18th instant, I conveyed to His Excellency the Viceroy the expression of the deep sympathy felt by Your Excellency and the whole of the inhabitants of Hongkong at the calamity with which this city has been visited; and I have now the honour to forward a copy of the communication just received from the Viceroy, expressing His Excellency's acknowledgments for the same.

I am also desired, both by the Shamen Municipal Council and the Trustees of the Garden Fund, to whom I made known Your Excellency's most generous offer, to supply trees and other plants to replace those destroyed by the whirlwind, to tender their sincere thanks, on behalf of the entire foreign community, for the kind sympathy shown, and the aid so promptly offered; and to state that they will most probably be glad to avail themselves of the proffered aid when time has enabled them to clear away sufficiently to ascertain what is required.

With the expression of my own special thanks for Your Excellency's humanity and courtesy on this sad occasion.—I have, &c.,

H. F. HANCE, Acting Consul. His Excellency John Pope Hennessy, C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Hongkong.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY TO H. M. ACTING CONSUL, 17th April, 1878.

Governor HENNESSY'S SYMPATHY.

I have had the honour to receive your note, in which I learn that His Excellency the Governor of Hongkong has been good enough to express his commiseration for the people of Canton under their recent sufferings caused by the late tornado; and from it I discern the breadth of His Excellency's humane sympathy, which finds equal expression in respect to the nationality of his objects. Not only myself, but the gentry and people of the whole city, unite in landing this trait of His Excellency's character.

I have humbly attempted to do my duty during the three years of my administration, but I feel that it is to my own shortcomings that must be ascribed this want of Heaven's favour, which has thus resulted in recurring disasters bringing sorrow to my people, and it impossible to express my feelings of humiliation and awe.

I have directed the local authorities to take measures, with the charitable associations and the lending gentry, for the alleviation of the people's distress, to bury the dead, to heal the wounded, and to melt out succour to those who are left destitute and without means of support; and this, too, is only what is due from any one to his fellow men.

I beg you will communicate this reply to His Excellency, at the same time conveying to him my thanks and my distinguished consideration.

Lu Akum was fined 10 shillings for stealing flowers in the Public Gardens.

Tsang Ahah, a cook, was sent to six weeks' hard labour for stealing a quilt.

Tung Ahn, a coolie, was sent to 21 days' hard labour for stealing a tub valued at 15 cents.

DISORDERLY SAILORS.

George Westgate, steward; and Edward Underhill, seaman, Sailor's Home; were charged by Inspector Oradock with disorderly conduct at the Home. The 1st defendant was fined $2, and the 2nd half a dollar.

CHILD SCALPING.

ARTFUL DODGER.

Cheng Aiyong, a painter, was charged with endeavouring to obtain money by false pretences. It appears he had gone to a painter, and said that Mr. Vanhook wanted his house whitewashed outside, and asked the cost; he was told $120, and said "Very well I will tell my master." The painter promised him a "cumbay" if he got him the job, agreeing to give him a pair of shoes, and a dollar. The defendant also went to a carpenter's shop and got a lot of men to go to work on the same house. It was afterwards found to be a hoax. The defendant admitted that he had misled the painter and carpenter, because he had been kidnapped to Singapore some years back, and the complainants had something to do with it. Fined 20 shillings for disorderly conduct.
